PROFILE

COMMUNITY. CULTURE. COMMUNICATION.

Daniel Olasoji is a Nigerian-born Australian community consultant, speaker, facilitator and host working across community development, health research, education, government, events and media.

His work centres the people most affected by decisions and turns their insight into practical programs, stronger partnerships and better conversations. As a co-founder of African Youth Alliance, Daniel has helped build culturally responsive programs that strengthen identity, wellbeing, educational engagement, leadership and aspiration. At Baker Heart and Diabetes Institute, he connected researchers with lived-experience contributors and helped teams embed meaningful community engagement into health research.
